THE PAPER FOR ALL HACKNEY PEOPLE

Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses in Hackney

Issue 200 26 January 2009

Feeling parky?

IT may be cold out, but spring is around the corner. So head out for a walk in Hackney – and cast a vote that could win up to £400,000 to help revamp Shoreditch Park. Voting for the Help a London Park campaign, launched by the Mayor of London last year, closes on 30 January. Hackney has the largest expanse of green spaces in inner London to explore, and there is a wealth of information to help residents get started.

• To cast your vote for Shoreditch Park, see p12; to find out more about walking in Hackney see p7.

OLYMPIC VICTORY

By Emma Britton

A GOVERNMENT boost of £135million towards the 2012 media centres has been announced, confirming they will be built as permanent structures in Hackney Wick.

The centres will house around 20,000 journalists from across the world, reporting to an audience of around four billion. The new budget includes funding to ensure the buildings have the flexibility to allow for job opportunities after the Olympic and Paralympic Games, a key issue the Council has been campaigning for.

The funding towards the International Broadcast Centre and Main Press Centre has been allocated to meet a shortfall in private sector funding due to the global economic downturn.

The Government insists the overall £9.3billion budget will remain unchanged.

Hackney Council Chief Executive Tim Shields said: "The Council has been campaigning for both the Main Press Centre and International Broadcast Centre to be permanent buildings in Hackney Wick to support a legacy use for digital, media and creative industries. This news is a big step in the right direction towards providing a meaningful and lasting employment legacy for local people.

"The media centres represent the single most significant opportunity for

This news is a big step in the right direction towards providing a meaningful and lasting employment legacy an economic legacy for East London from the Games.

"Leading media companies have expressed strong interest in moving to the centres in legacy, and the Council will continue to use every opportunity to work with Olympic decision makers to secure this outcome for Hackney."

Extra cash for the Olympic Village in Newham was also announced, following a meeting of the Olympic Funders Group, which includes Chancellor Alistair Darling, and was also attended by Mayor of London Boris Johnson.

Olympics Minister Tessa Jowell said: "The Village and media centres are essential to a successful London Games with a real lasting legacy. With private-sector funding now much more difficult to secure because of the global economic downturn, it is right that we take steps to safeguard these projects.

"Lower than anticipated construction inflation and good progress across the project has reduced risks, meaning that the overall budget is unchanged and enough contingency funds remain.

"Increased public investment in these projects also means that the public purse will receive a greater share of receipts when they are sold after the Games."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Marking the Holocaust

RESIDENTS are invited to mark Holocaust Memorial Day on Tuesday, 27 January, at a ceremony to be held in Hackney Town Hall Square.

At 10.45am the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Ian Rathbone will lay a floral tribute at the Holocaust Memorial Tree.

The theme of this year's event, which takes place on the anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp in 1945, is Stand Up to Hatred, as Holocaust Memorial Day also remembers victims of more recent genocides, including in Rwanda, Bosnia, and Darfur.

Find your family past

HAVE you thought about tracing your family roots or about how you can contribute to Hackney's archives? Hackney Routes, a new joint project between Every Generation, Hackney Archives and Hackney Museum, funded through the Hackney Heritage and Built Environment Partnership, can help you get started.

A series of free workshops and events across the borough will explore how individuals can research and record their own family roots and the story of their communities. They will also encourage discussion between communities about the different routes people have taken to settle in Hackney. The first event – a discussion for adults on family history and genealogy – takes place from 6pm-7.30pm on 29 January at Hackney Museum in Reading Lane.

For more information on the project, to get involved, or to find dates events and activities call: 020 7241 2886; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/ca-archives

Young voices heard

MEMBERS of Hackney Youth Parliament (HYP) were among those joining the Prime Minister and leading figures from government, sport, music and business at the launch of the new national coalition saying 'No to Knives' last month.

Gordon Brown was joined by Richard Taylor, Rio Ferdinand, John Terry, Austin Healey, Brooke Kinsella and other campaign ambassadors to help launch the coalition on December 11.

Thirteen young people from HYP, aged 14-16, met with families and community groups who have direct experience of knife crime. They were selected to visit Downing Street as the Prime Minister appealed to young people not to carry knives.

The young people's energy, enthusiasm, and engagement with the campaign and events on the day were an impressive example of their commitment to and work with Hackney's Youth Service.

“This is a great campaign with high-profile people helping to raise awareness of knife crime”

The Prime Minister's Office has since been in touch through the Youth Participation Team to convey praise and thanks to the young people, and to support their continued involvement with the campaign's steering group.

Matthew Oyetunji, 14, HYP member for North East, said: "This is a great campaign with high-profile people helping to raise awareness of knife crime across the country. It's a step in the right direction that will involve young people. I'm proud we were at the launch to represent Hackney."

Over the next year HYP will be consulting with key decision makers and delivering a series of innovative and exciting events and activities to hundreds of young people across the borough. They aim to raise awareness, open debate and engage their peers on a range of issue affecting young people in Hackney, including tackling knife crime.

The Government has announced £20 million of new funding for community organisations to provide activities and support for young people, and the 'No to Knives' coalition will work to help prevent young people from becoming involved with carrying knives.

TWO large-scale art projects giving residents across the five host boroughs for the 2012 Games the opportunity to get involved have been chosen as the winners of the first CREATE Art Award. Dominoes, a giant domino rally by performance artists Station House Opera, will involve 50,000 breeze blocks running through Hackney, Greenwich, Newham, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest, and will use local volunteers. Rooted in the Earth, by artist Joshua Sofaer, celebrates unsung heroes and asks residents to celebrate local people by nominating them to have their names planted as large floral artworks in park flowerbeds.

Both artists work in the host boroughs and their projects will be unveiled this summer as part of the CREATE09 festival, celebrating culture and the arts in East and South East London in the run up to the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Joshua said: "I'm really looking forward to reading the stories people write in support of the names they propose." Station House Opera's artistic director Julian Maynard Smith said: "We'll be working with over 2,000 volunteers – everyone living and working along the route will be involved in making the project a success."

Dalston developments on track

TfL has begun demolition of around 20 former shops and flats on Kingsland High Street in Dalston as part of its project to extend the East London line, bringing four new London Overground stations to the borough.

Sections of the high street will be closed during the works, due to finish by April, and pedestrian and vehicle traffic will be maintained throughout.

The shops will be replaced with a new development following consultation by the Council on planning and design guidance which will advise potential developers and ensure whatever replaces the shops is high quality and well integrated.

Residents will also have an opportunity to help shape future development in Dalston during a consultation on a masterplan for the town centre, setting out policies such as what land can be used for, the height of new buildings, and new community facilities. Both public consultations are due to start in March.

Voluntary services together

AN agreement affecting thousands of Hackney residents, the voluntary sector, and Hackney Council has been published. More than 60 volunteers and chief officers from the Council attended the launch of the Hackney Compact on 13 January at a special event held at Freeform Arts, Richmond Road, E8. The Hackney Compact is an agreement setting out how the Council and voluntary sector groups can work together to provide top quality services for the borough's residents. The police, City and Hackney Primary Care Trust, The Learning Trust, Hackney Homes, Hackney Voluntary Action, and Hackney Community College were among those who also signed up, together with representatives from the Community Empowerment Network and community groups. The Hackney Compact can be downloaded from www.teamhackney.org/hackneycompact

Changes in the pipeline

COME along and find out more about how a £3.2 million Thames Water mains replacement scheme in Lower Clapton will affect the area. A drop-in session is set to take place on 28 January, between 4.30pm and 6.30pm, in a mobile unit at the junction of Mildenhall Road and Lower Clapton Road, by the pond.

Thames Water will spend the next 16 months replacing nearly five miles of Victorian pipes with new, tough, and flexible plastic in the area around Lea Bridge Road, Lower Clapton Road, Millfields Road, Mayola Road, and the River Lea. Project manager, Tim Owens, said: "Wherever possible, new pipes will be placed inside the old metal ones, which means less trench-digging, minimising disruption."

Works are scheduled to begin on 16 February, and local residents will also receive letters informing them about the scheme.

Free month for winning tenants

THREE lucky tenants have won a rent-free January after winning a Hackney Homes competition. Gloria Sapias (below) from Stoke Newington; Joseph Kirwan from Dalston; and Olushola Davies from Homerton have enjoyed the past month free of charge, as part of a campaign to encourage residents to pay their rent on time.

During the festive period, nearly 12,000 residents did so, and more than 1,000 paid off rent arrears totalling over £138,000.

A toy story for all time...

By
Kate Gibney

AT its peak, British toy making was a major industry. Manufacturers were household names, and products known around the world.

Buy-outs, mergers, and the death of company founders saw a number of companies disappear in the 1970s and 1980s. But now the Museum of Childhood in Bethnal Green is helping preserve Britain's toy story for children of all ages.

The archives of four major manufacturers – Lines Brothers, Abbatt Toys, Mettoy, and Palitoy – were donated to the museum when the companies ceased trading in the 1970s and 1980s. Thanks to a £244,500 Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) grant, the huge collection is now the focus of a three-and-a-half-year project at the museum and offers a fascinating look at some of the children's best-loved toys over the past century.

Star Wars figures and games, Action Man, Sindy, Spacehoppers and Corgi cars are among some of the old friends in the archive, which also includes photographs, adverts, catalogues and materials from the hey-day of British toy manufacturing.

The project will include a six-month exhibition; an online archive; various resources for teachers; and heritage based toy-making workshops for primary schools.

Catherine Howell, the museum's Collections Officer said: "To have the chance, through the HLF, to preserve the historical records of some of the most famous children's toys of the past is a real gift – not only to the museum but to all, young and old, who benefit from its collections."

IN COURT

Fines for underage knife sales

TWO shopkeepers have been fined £1,250 plus combined legal costs of £750 for selling a knife to a 14-year-old. Alhaj Zengl, owner of Pound Plus store on Chatsworth Road, and employee Belkheir Belhag, were caught out before Christmas during a joint Hackney Trading Standards and police test purchase initiative using underage volunteers. Thames Magistrates Court heard on 7 January how the pair had sold the 14-year-old volunteer a 12-centimetre knife. Overall, during Operation Blunt 2 traders were found to be acting responsibly but a small minority sold knives to young people, and now face legal action. Fiona Fletcher-Smith, Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, said: "Our Trading Standards officers will always act decisively when traders are found breaking the law in this way. Clearly the courts take it very seriously as well."

Trading Standards officers in Hackney regularly inform licensees of their responsibilities under the law. In 2007 the legal age to buy knives was raised from 16 to 18. Traders who sell knives to under-18s face a £5,000 fine or six months in prison.

Penalty for benefits cheat

A BENEFITS cheat has received a two-year Community Rehabilitation Order for defrauding Hackney taxpayers of more than £17,000.

Samantha Tonge, 34, of Hassett Road, had previously pleaded guilty to three charges of failing to notify a change of circumstances, concerning receipt of benefits, which is contrary to the Social Security Administration Act 1992. Snaresbrook Crown Court heard on 7 January how the fraud began in 2003, when she failed to declare to Hackney Council that she was receiving Tax Credits.

As a result, Tonge received a Housing Benefit overpayment of £13,725.10, and a Council Tax Benefit overpayment of £3,509.40, which she will have to pay back.

Judge Tudor Owen said that he had considered a prison sentence, but took into account mitigating circumstances such as Tonge being the sole carer of five children, and sentenced her to a two-year Community Rehabilitation Order.

WHEN Polish labourers were found to be sleeping in new public toilets in Stamford Hill a few years ago, it became national news.

Although reported in a light-hearted way, it was a serious issue and a drop-in session has been set up to help Eastern Europeans who came to London looking for work, but ended up sleeping rough.

The Council's north east neighbourhood wardens team, based in Stamford Hill, has been working with the police, homeless charity Thames Reach, the Primary Care Trust, voluntary organisations, and local residents to tackle concerns about street drinking.

Martin Harris, of Thames Reach, said: "Many Eastern Europeans come to London on the promise of a job but when they get here, the work doesn't come through. Their money runs out and they can't afford to go home. At the same time they're highly skilled and really want to work."

Without proper

paperwork and with limited English, finding work can prove impossible, and the workers are not entitled to benefits. Sleeping rough and alcohol dependency can then become a way of life.

St Ignatius Church in Stamford Hill has been giving sandwiches to local homeless people every day for years, and a drop-in session has been set up in the church hall.

Martin, with Neighbourhood Warden Manager Gerry Lotsu talk visitors through their paperwork, while volunteer Polish

“ Their money runs out and they can't afford to go home. At the same time they are highly skilled and want to work ” interpreters check they have a GP and dentist, and get advice on where to find help with alcohol dependency.

Sylvester, 36, a carpenter from Poland who had his papers stolen, said: "I have been helped very much. I feel safer now. These are very good people. We all want to work."

FAMILY, friends, carers and a magician helped a resident celebrate her 100th birthday. Mrs Charlotte Ginn received her congratulatory card from the Queen on 14 January. The big day was marked with cake and a magic entertainer at the Southwold Road supported living scheme. Mrs Ginn, whose maiden name was Rising, was born and lived in Berkshire Road, Stratford. She has four daughters and a son. She moved to the scheme – run by Family Mosaic Housing Association and the Council's Social Care Services, when it opened in 1996.

Just 30 minutes walking a day lowers your risk of heart disease and cancer and helps you maintain your weight

DID YOU KNOW

Put the spring in your step

By
Kate Gibney

It may still be pretty chilly outside, but Hackney is still a beautiful place to stretch your legs. If you are resolved to get more exercise this year, or simply want to discover more of the borough, there is a wealth of resources to get you started.

Hackney's Parks Department has funded a reprint of a series of six self-guided walks from the Hackney Environment Forum. They are packed with local information to help people get the most out of their ramble.

They take in a variety of green spaces from Hackney Marshes and Mabley Green to Clissold Park and Stoke Newington Common.

The walks are along tarmac and grass paths, mainly flat and easy walking, and the leaflets provide information about steps and other routes.

For residents who want some company or hands-on guidance, Transport for London has organised two free, guided Winter Wanders in Hackney. The walks take place on 31 January and 1 February and take two-and-a-half to three hours. The first starts at 11am outside Tottenham Hale Station and finishes close to Bromley by Bow station, taking in the Olympic Park site and River Lea. The second starts at 1.30pm outside Stoke Newington Station and finishes at Hackney Wick Station.

The Council has invested £750,000 in walking and accessibility schemes over the last three years, and has a map of walking routes to help residents plan their journeys on its website. There are also a wealth of websites for walkers – so get on your feet.

Television

• The Fixer

Look out for the De Beauvoir Estate and Hoxton High Street in the second series of ITV's hitman drama The Fixer, which filmed in Hackney in November, 2008. Set to return to our screens soon, the six new episodes follow state-sponsored assassin John Mercer (Andrew Buchan) as he goes about his business on the dark side of the law.

• Moses Jones

Ridley Road Market was used for two major scenes in the BBC2 series. The story – told over three 60-minute episodes – begins when a wave of violence hits London following the discovery of the body of a man in the Thames. Senior partner Detective Inspector Moses Jones (Shaun Parkes) and his youthful sidekick DS

Dan Twentyman (Matt Smith) are assigned to the case.

• Ashes to Ashes: Series 2

Crews returned to Hackney for the second series, shooting in and around Andrews Road, Regents Canal and Scrutton Street. Filmed throughout autumn and New Year, the show will be broadcast later in 2009, and is set in 1982, during the Falklands War, moving on almost six months after the events of the first series. The first series saw DCI Gene Hunt (Philip Glenister) from Life on Mars joined by an experienced female detective, and trained psychologist from the 21st century. DI Alex Drake (Keeley Hawes) wakes up in 1981 after being shot in 2008.

Popular locations in Hackney include (from left) Ridley Road Market, Coronet Street, and the Regents Canal. Aspiring filmmakers trained at 3 Mills Studio, E3, as part of the New Pathways Film Fund.

Look closely next time you're watching TV you might recognise more than just your favourite actors.

Hackney is one of the most popular places with film and TV makers. On average 27 film crews are filming in the borough each month.

The most used areas for filming in Hackney are Hoxton, Shoreditch and Broadway Market. Another popular street is Coronet Street, a cobbled street off Hoxton Square that is used to double Soho and period New York.

Richard George, location manager for the recent film Dead Man Running filmed on the Woodberry Down Estate – starring 50 Cent, Danny Dyer and Brenda Blethyn – said: “Due to the nature of lower budget filmmaking, we had to find an estate which could serve as two or three locations.

“Once we were shown Woodberry Down it looked like we had it. With some great views across the city from the top floors and about four or five different architectural styles, it suited us and the storyline nicely.”

“We thought this was going to be tricky as a work environment, but to be honest, once we settled in everyone was great, particularly on the night shoot where we had local people chatting and hanging out with the crew and police officers right up until we wrapped.”

Here is a just a snapshot of some recent films and TV programmes with scenes shot in Hackney.

Filming in Hackney is coordinated by the Council Film Office. It liaises with production companies and residents – whose support is vital. The Film Office is self-funding and profits are fed into community projects. Call Rebecca Staffolani on: 020 8356 3541; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/film

Film

• Dead Man Running
Out later this year. The film focuses on an ex-convict who is trying to become a law-abiding citizen. He is given 24 hours to come up with £100,000 to pay off a ruthless loan shark, or become a ‘dead man running’. Look out for the Woodberry Down Estate where many scenes were filmed in November and December, 2008.

• The Firm
Due out in spring and based on the 1989 classic UK TV drama, which focused on football hooligan culture. In October, 2008, two scenes were filmed

“Everyone was great, particularly on the night shoot when we had local people chatting with the crew” in Hackney: a stand-off with football fans and police on Orsman Road and a fight scene on Rosina Street and Shepherds Lane, E9.

• Heartless
Filmed on Hackney Road and Gorsuch Street, it stars Jim Sturgess and Timothy Spall. Jamie Morgan's life has always been blighted by the large, heart-shaped birthmark on his face. He lives in a world dominated by gang culture, where he learns there is a reason for everything. When Jamie accepts this, the world reveals itself as a thing of great beauty – and his real nightmare starts.

• Lesbian Vampire Killers
Out in March. Scenes were filmed near Victoria Park. The film also stars duo James Cordon and Mathew Horne from the hit BBC TV series Gavin & Stacey.

Best Hand Car Wash is a visual poem about a fleeting moment between a young carwash worker and a Bengali housewife on Hackney Road. The locations – a carwash, a laundrette and cafe – are all within a few hundred metres from each other and the short film will feature local residents that work at each location, alongside actors Paul Woodson and Rakhee Sweeney. Writer and director Mo Saha lives in the area. She said: “I wanted to tell a story set in places that I walk past everyday. They are the kind of locations you find on every street across the UK but you rarely take any notice of.”

Funding pathways to a film career

SOME of the money raised through filming in Hackney is used to give budding filmmakers a chance to write, produce, and direct their own short films.

Now in its 2nd year, the New Pathways Film Fund is a partnership between Hackney, Tower Hamlets, and Newham, and is part of the London Borough Film Fund Challenge.

The scheme looks for original and exciting stories, preferably making use of locations in the three boroughs.

After scripts were submitted in September, 15 finalists took part in training at 3 Mills Studio, E3. A panel of judges awarded six bursaries of £1,500 – two from Hackney – and the winners have been filming their work throughout January. The films will be ready for the East End Film Festival in April.

The Weir is about a group of local children who have dark stories behind their everyday lives, but carry on regardless. Alex Taylor has worked as a freelance filmmaker and composer in Lower Clapton Road for three years. He said: “It will be shot in the Hackney Wick area, and also the navigation canal and weir at Lea Bridge Roundabout, using post-modern montage effects and a gritty hand held camera. I'm hoping it will show young people and the amazing landscape that Hackney offers in a new light.”

Making his business fun

By Emma Britton & Donna Walsh

BUSINESSMAN Sinclair Beecham's enthusiasm bubbles over as he explains why he chose to open his first hotel in Hoxton.

"It's vibrant, exciting, constantly changing, leading edge. It's a buzz of energy, charming, and it has a soul."

He had no former experience of running a hotel when he opened the Hoxton Hotel in Great Eastern Street. But then he had no experience of running a sandwich chain when he co-founded Pret a Manger – and that became a runaway success. When he and his business partner sold Pret last year, its price-tag was reported to be an impressive £345m.

Hackney had two attractions for Sinclair when he chose the location for his new venture in September 2006 – the hotel would be within easy reach of the City, and it would be in an up-and-coming borough. Hackney's restaurants, coffee bars, clubs and pubs, markets and art galleries are unrivalled anywhere else in London.

"When you stay in a hotel, you want to stay somewhere where you feel good about yourself," he says. "I love the bars and restaurants here and I try to encourage guests to visit them. I publish a guide for them so they don't just come to our restaurant."

Sinclair is clearly a real fan and lists among his personal favourites, Canteloupe, Shoreditch House, Loungelover, and The Diner.

The 50-year-old entrepreneur, who started his working life as a cashier at NatWest Bank, says the secret to his success is to think like a customer.

He was inspired to open a hotel after becoming fed up with paying "£3 for a can of Coke from the mini bar or £2.50 for a Kit Kat." Water in guests' rooms is free at the Hoxton Hotel and drinks, snacks and alcohol are sold at supermarket prices from the reception desk.

The father-of-two said: "As a customer it really annoys me to be ripped off. I'd like to be treated with respect. Too many people lose sight of the customer."

And it is that ruthless focus that has brought him

“It's vibrant, exciting, constantly changing, leading edge”

success. Recognition came at the highest level when he was made an MBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours List in 2000 for services to the catering industry.

His entrepreneurial expertise and endless enthusiasm mean he is perfectly placed as a judge for the Mayor of Hackney's Business Awards. For the second year in a row, Sinclair has offered to judge entries from across the borough.

He acknowledged the economic climate makes it "a very challenging time for businesses," but encouraged Hackney business people to enter.

"Business is fun," he said. "Encouraging people to start business creates opportunity, wealth, investment and improvement."

"The awards are designed to look at a whole range of businesses. There's a category and an opportunity for everybody. If you've got a business and you think it's going well, have a go."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I have been invited to a wedding and would like to buy a recycled gift for the happy couple. Any tips on where I could look for this?

A: As well as many everyday products such as newspapers, tins, cans, glass bottles and jars containing recycled content, manufacturers are now increasingly using recycled materials for a range of products, with many making great gift ideas. Buying recycled products is a great way of 'closing the recycling loop', helping the environment, and to find out what can be made from your recycling.

The best place to start looking would be the online Recycled Products Guide, which has been compiled by WRAP (the Waste and Resources Action Programme). More than 450 companies are registered on this website with goods ranging from gift ideas to building materials. Good luck and enjoy the wedding!

Switching to disposable nappies will save you money and could win you a prize

Pin a winner

All stories by
James Willsher

NEW mums and dads could win £100 of Marks and Spencer vouchers by being the 1,000th Hackney parent to make the switch to real nappies.

So far, 950 people in the borough have signed up to dispense with disposables and choose real nappies instead for their young ones, saving an estimated £500 each.

With every baby using a total of around 5,000 disposable nappies, the result is eight million being thrown away every day in the UK.

The carbon footprint of real nappies can be up to 40 per cent less than using disposable ones if some simple steps are followed, such as using A+ rated washing machines and air-drying them instead of using a tumble drier.

The Council can also help cloth nappy converts with a £54 cash incentive to put towards washing costs.

The Hackney Real Nappy Network is a group of parents using real cloth nappies that holds regular informal Nappy Natters drop-in events.

Be quick and vote for Shoreditch Park before the deadline

Last chance to cast your vote

DON'T miss your last chance to vote for Shoreditch Park to be one of ten open spaces transformed by a £6million cash boost.

Votes need to be cast by 5pm on 30 January for the ten grants of up to £400,000 that are up for grabs to make green spaces in London safer and more enjoyable. The winners will be the parks with the most votes.

The Mayor of London launched the campaign to regenerate open spaces in November last year, giving Londoners the chance to vote for one of 47 parks shortlisted for funding.

Kim Wright, Corporate Director for Community

Services, said: "If successful, this funding will help us continue to deliver many of the improvements identified by the local community as part of our major investment in and redevelopment of Hackney's parks."

A single grant of up to £2million for one large park is also available, though a panel of experts will decide the winner of that funding.

Cook it with a crowd

IF you're beginning to tire of chomping your way through mounds of winter vegetables, head to Stoke Newington Farmers' Market for some inspiration.

Market Chef aims to help people inspire each other with local food knowledge, rather than stay at home with celebrity chefs.

The theme of the next event will be troublesome vegetables – such as curly kale.

All food will be made from produce on sale on the day. It will be cooked in an outside kitchen, and as well as watching the demonstrations, visitors will be able to taste the final dishes and give their verdict.

Demonstrator Laurie stirs his 'happiness soup' at a previous event

Residents are also being invited to take part in the event as cooks. The market takes place every Saturday from 10am-2.30pm at William Patten School, Stoke Newington Church Street.

Talking about change

MORE than 200 people packed into Abney Hall to find out how Stoke Newington could become a beacon of sustainability.

The Transition Towns event on 18 January saw community groups, social enterprises and Council officers discussing energy conservation, waste reduction, recycling, and sustainable transport.

The event was part of a national campaign to get people thinking about long-term reduction in energy use, as well as developing local projects.

It is hoped Stoke Newington can become a Transition Town, and those gathered also heard from a successful sister project in Brixton, south London.

The Council supports a number of waste-cutting schemes, including furniture reuse; Give or Take days; and subsidised compost bins and wormeries.

She was sent to Bergen-Belsen concentration camp where only her father survived and after returning home he found her diary, which has become one of the world's most widely read books.

Cheryl Day, head teacher of Clapton Girls', said: "The event was a fantastic opportunity for pupils to talk about the impact the diary and working with the Anne Frank Trust has had on them, as well as how relevant they believe the diary's themes are today."

PUPILS from Clapton Girls' Technology College commemorated the life of Holocaust victim Anne Frank through a unique exhibition to coincide with the launch of a BBC dramatisation of the schoolgirl's life.

Three students reviewed the BBC1 drama The Diary of Anne Frank in front of their peers and spoke about what Anne Frank means to them today, including how her legacy lives on in schools and communities.

Top marks for an 'outstanding' school

WOODBERRY Down Primary School has been declared "outstanding" in all areas in its Ofsted report.

The school was given the rating by the Government's education standards body after employing innovative teaching methods to support its pupils from mainly Turkish, African and Caribbean backgrounds as well as a very high proportion of refugees.

The report stated: "Woodberry Down is an outstanding school that provides high quality education for all its pupils."

It added that headteacher Greg

Pupils on a trip to Parliament last year

Wallace and his team "have very high expectations of pupils and staff and ensure the school's policies and procedures are applied consistently. Teaching and learning are outstanding, as pupils make very rapid progress from low starting points to reach the national average by the end of Year Six."

Mr Wallace said: "We were all thrilled with the report, which reflects the truly wonderful children, staff, parents and governors who make up the school community. We were especially pleased because many of our teaching methods and curriculum projects are not in widespread use."

Baroness Howells and some Hackney children look over the new resource pack

Discovering Jamaican past

A UNIQUE education pack for Hackney schools about the impact of the first wave of Jamaican immigrants on British history was launched at the House of Lords.

Living Under One Roof – Windrush and Beyond was unveiled at Conversation on Community Cohesion, hosted by peers Baroness Amos and Baroness Howells. The event included an introduction to the Windrush primary schools resource pack, with presentations by Hackney children, teachers and Windrush parents and an open discussion on building community cohesion. Maud Blair, Education Improvement Adviser at The Learning Trust, said: "Living Under One Roof – Windrush and beyond is a unique and important resource, and not just for educationalists in Hackney, but across the UK. "It has all the necessary information plus an array of materials and tools to teach our children about an important landmark event in the history of modern Britain. It details the hopes, dreams and aspirations of the Jamaicans who arrived, as well as the broad contribution they have made to British society." The pack was developed by The Learning Trust in partnership with playwright Lorna Holder and will be distributed to all Hackney primaries. It includes films of the arrival of the Empire Windrush and The Notting Hill Riots.

PREVIEW

Anything is possible – 27 Jan-14 Feb, AOP Gallery, Leonard St, EC2

CAROL Allen Storey is a New York photographer specialising in portraying children, women, human rights and the environment. She conveys stories of hope where there seems to be little. She recently spent time with international children's charity, Spirituality for Kids, the results of which make up this exhibition. Spending a year with the project in the UK, she chose eight ethnically diverse children to focus on, all there to learn how to cope better. Capturing how life feels for these young people and their ability to learn and change with support, she shows that anything is possible.

He has recorded people in their home territory, and his collection of stark images tells the broader story of life in South Africa for black people. Hinged on apartheid, he challenges the viewer by showing both intimate people images and lost open landscapes. By keeping the focus on his subjects – or non-subjects – open and frequently off centre, the 'innocent' composition of his work is the common thread. Locals are photographed passing by a huge billboard advert, and relaxed friends are captured happily dining and dancing together in modest surroundings. A chicken is pictured in a blacked-out room, and two goats stand nonchalantly shoulder-to-shoulder. Also thrown into this mix are pictures of brick walls – stand-alone images that seem to reinforce the sense of the dreary built environment contrasted by the great natural landscapes. All are elements of what these South African people live with everyday, great expanses, wandering animals, dusty modern advertising and modest property. He has captured their fabric and in doing so gives a window to the windowless. We are looking at images of people who live the underdog life, a very different world to those for whom it is likely the photographs were taken for. Rivington Place is open Tues to Sat, hours vary. For info call: 020 7749 1240; or visit: www.rivingtonplace.org

Dance to the death

REVIEW

By Kate Gibney

In Blood: The Bacchae, Arcola Theatre, E8, 8pm, until 31 Jan

TO first of all be clear. This is a play to enjoy in its own right.

If beautifully lit and choreographed fight dance, rhythmic, catchy music and a colourful set are your thing, you will be happy to overlook the fact that the script is slightly rambling and littered with profanities.

If you are hoping to find more than an echo of Euripides in this tale of fighting in 1920s Brazilian society you may be a little thrown. Capoeira is a Brazilian martial art incorporating diverse elements of African culture including dance, music, acrobatics and various fighting forms and the merging of two cultural forms both involving ritual, war and passion. Interspersed with a dazzling display of this, is the story of a trail of murders; a cunning hero of the people with a personal score to settle; and a coke-addicted police chief who each day leaves a rose on the spot where he killed a woman, and promptly fell in love with her. The drama seems to tail off towards the end – there is a moment where it seemed ready to wrap up – but then continued for an epilogue of sex and death. However, it was the elegant dance that made a real impression – the Arcola offers twice-weekly classes for those who aren't daunted by this expert performance. For more info visit: www.arcolatheatre.com; or call: 020 7503 1645. Eat yourself Italian

NOW in its fifth year, Italian lifestyle event La Dolce Vita 2009 is focusing on the delights of Italian cuisine.

Celebrating the joys of traditional Italian produce and wine – as well as design, fashion, holidays and property – the four-day event will take place at Kensington's Olympia Exhibition Centre.

Five of the most famous chefs cooking Italian food in the UK will each create one course – starter, pasta, fish, main and dessert – of the perfect Italian meal.

So far, Giorgio Locatelli of Locanda Locatelli, Theo Randall of the InterContinental on Park Lane and Andy Needham of the Michelin-starred Zafferano in Knightsbridge have all been confirmed. Visitors can dine on all five courses or just pick a selection. For cooks, The Producers' Market, will showcase a hand-picked selection of artisan food producers from throughout Italy.

La Dolce Vita takes place at Grand Hall, Olympia Exhibition Centre, W14, from 26-29 March. Tickets cost £16, £14 adv, £8 children. For booking and further details visit: ladolcevitaevent.co.uk

A YOUTH music mentor has received a prestigious national arts qualification.

Steven McKenzie, 22, has been awarded one of the first Gold Arts Awards to be given out in London, following years of work with Hackney-based music development charity, Rising Tide.

The awards are national qualifications funded by the Arts Council to promote the development of young people as artists and leaders.

Steven joined Rising Tide eight years ago where he developed his musical talents. Since then he has mentored more than 65 young people in the borough as part of the charity's Positive Activities for Young People (PAYP) programme during the past two years, which he also planned and managed last summer.

Steven said: "I feel proud because I can say that I have achieved something and did not give up, although it was tough. The award has been a challenge but has enlightened me about the importance of developing planning and organising skills, which I will use in my career."

As well as being a music tutor and touring musician, Steven is undertaking the

Snoop into the past and stay to help out

By Rhasan Brunner, 14

THERE are many ways you could spend your weekend. Contrast would like to recommend snooping.

We are not suggesting you go round peeking through people's letterboxes or rummaging through bins. Hackney has a place where you can stand in other people's living rooms, and walk through four centuries of history – simply by stepping from one room to the next. This place is the Geffrye Museum.

If you have never been before then you must. That's an order. You could even encourage your teacher to organise a school trip. The museum has won several awards for its educational work, and runs a series of seminars and workshops.

Its permanent collection shows the changing style of English homes from 1600 to the present day, and there are exhibitions throughout the year. Until February you can see a Choosing the Chintz exhibition, which gives a new insight into how men's and women's roles have changed.

You may feel so at home in the rooms that you want to move in. Unfortunately, this isn't possible.

But you could try volunteering like Jade,

Yasmin, Shantel and Sunny, who are aged between 14 and 19. You will get involved in a number of the activities, as well as giving tours.

All the volunteers agreed doing tours was a little frightening, but that it has improved their confidence.

Yasmin said: "When there were more people it was quite scary but as I got into my flow I didn't feel nervous. In the beginning, it was nerve-racking but I've built my confidence up now."

The museum offers all the information you'll need and gives volunteers topics to research. If you like history then you should definitely give this a try – contact the museum for details.

Children keeping healthy at London Fields Lido

All stories by
Siobhan Silbert

A NEW initiative has been launched by the NHS to encourage people to make positive, long-term changes to their lifestyles.

The change4life campaign aims to get people thinking about things like healthier eating and exercise.

Did you know that the prevalence of obesity has increased three-fold in the last 30 years? Or that 90 per cent of today's children could be overweight or obese by 2050?

As part of change4life, CHPCT and the Council are gathering views on how they can make the borough a healthier, happier place to live, play and work.

A Healthy Weight

community event will be held at Ocean in Mare Street on 31 January.

Residents will be able to talk about exactly what they need to help them make changes in their lives.

This could include more healthy food outlets, better play spaces for children, or better access to sports.

...and bringing the past to life

WERE you or your children born in a Hackney hospital?

Did you visit the dentist in Hackney when you were a child? Do you remember the beginnings of the National Health Service 60 years ago, or even a time before that when people paid to go to the doctor? We're looking for memories and experiences that will help to bring a new exhibition to life.

Hackney Museum's Life Savers, a fascinating look at healthcare in the borough over the last 100 years, will open in Reading Lane on 3 March for a fond trip down memory lane – which is where local people come in.

If you have an interesting story to tell about health in Hackney that could bring the exhibition to life, we'd love to hear from you.

NEWS IN BRIEF

New member for hospital trust board

CITY and Hackney Primary Care Trust (CHPCT) recently welcomed a new non-executive director to the board. Catherine Max is a consultant and adviser to the Government, as well as charity, voluntary sector, and not for profit organisations in policy, strategy and service improvement.

Her role as non-executive director at the trust is to make sure the interests of patients come first, and that services and finances are properly managed. She brings a wide range of experience in public health, sustainable development, economic development and employment, cultural services, and civil legal aid reform.

At the London Health Commission (LHC), Catherine spearheaded innovative work integrating health and sustainable development, which she is now developing in relation to social care.

Catherine is also the co-author with David Coats of Healthy Work, Productive Workplaces: Why the UK Needs More "Good Jobs" (LHC and Work Foundation 2005).

'First-rate' A&E service

VISITORS to Homerton Hospital's Accident and Emergency department are experiencing a high-quality service – according to a survey of patients carried out by the Healthcare Commission.

The hospital is in the top 20 per cent in the country for the majority of the questions asked about patients' satisfaction levels for A&E visits.

Dr John Coakley, Hospital Medical Director, said: "These returns in the survey show our A&E team to be providing a first rate service for local people. We score well in key categories such as waiting times for treatment; the quality of care given by staff; and even in communication with patients, which is commendable given that many do not speak English as a first language."

Patients commented on the hospital's friendly welcoming staff, the speed at which they were seen and the professional attitude of the doctors: "I was seen very quickly. The hospital has improved, and staff at reception are welcoming. Seating arrangements are better and it was excellent to see the children have their own secure area."

Locally-born playwright Harold Pinter (centre), a former Hackney Grocers' School pupil, returned to his home borough for location shots to be made in the filming of his outstandingly successful play, "The Caretaker." Star of the film, Donald Pleasance, and a cameraman make up the trio, who stopped work long enough for a break in the Britannia publichouse, Mare-street, and to pose especially for the "Gazette" photographer. In spite of the cold weather, the filming was watched by a large crowd in Hackney streets.

Pausing for reflection

By Sally England

THE death of playwright, actor, director, screenwriter and Nobel Prize winner Harold Pinter in December made headlines around the world.

Pinter's work has embedded itself in British culture. His plays, best known for the pregnant pauses in their dialogue, have brought the phrase 'Pinteresque' into the vernacular, and his most famous works – The Caretaker, The Homecoming and The Birthday Party – are often set for GCSE and A-level.

The man whose name is on our lips every time we feel stalked by hidden menace began life in Hackney on October 10, 1930. His father, Jack, a tailor with artistic leanings, and his mother Francesca, were both Jewish. The Pinter family had migrated from Portugal, while Francesca's family was from Poland.

Pinter attended Hackney Downs Grammar School, where he was influenced by teacher Joseph Brearley, who had an infectious passion for drama and poetry. He cast 15-year-old Pinter as Macbeth in a modern production of the play, dressed in a major-general's uniform. The young actor liked it so much he wore it on the bus to his home in Thistlewaite Road.

For many years Brearley and Pinter took long walks in the Hackney area, discussing literature and quoting poetry and plays to each other. Pinter never forgot those walks, and when Brearley died in 1977, he wrote a poem recalling them with great affection.

The Second World War saw Pinter evacuated, but he returned during the Blitz. His 1989 screen adaptation of Elizabeth Bowen's The Heat of the Day suggests the impact of his experiences in wartime London.

In 1963, Pinter returned to Hackney with what a Los Angeles reporter – and former Hackney Downs Pupil – described as 'a gallant band of enthusiasts' to make a film of The Caretaker. Titled 'Grimy London Suburb May Rival Hollywood', the Archives copy of the article has a handwritten protest added by the journalist: "I didn't write the headline!!"

Shot in an attic rented from the London County Council, the film was funded in what the Times considered 'a curious and encouraging fashion'.

Pinter, director Clive Donner, producer Lord Birkett and stars Donald Pleasance and Alan Bates, together with Broadway actor Robert Shaw, formed Caretaker Films Ltd, taking no pay until the film began to make a profit.

Pinter wrote, but never published, The Queen Of All The Fairies, a rather scathing account of his youth in the borough. The first page refers to Hackney's proliferation of milk bars, Italian cafes, 50 shilling tailors and barber shops.

Pinter's career carried him far from his Hackney upbringing. Yet in an interview with BBC Radio 3, Peter Hall – who directed several of Pinter's plays in the 1960s and 1970s – commented with admiration that most of his writing reflects a Cockney idea of taking the mickey, which Hall felt was essential to both Cockney comedy, and to Pinter's, comedy.

A HACKNEY Downs resident who ditched her car as part of a competition has scooped some top travel prizes.

The Give Up Your Car campaign, launched last year by the Council and Streetcar – the UK's largest car club operator – encouraged drivers in Hackney to give up their vehicles and opt for greener forms of transport.

Beth Walton won an annual travel card for zones one and two, a year's Streetcar membership, £200 Streetcar driving credit, and a £200 bike voucher. Everyone who entered the competition and followed through on their pledge to give up their car received a £25 Streetcar credit.

Streetcar has now launched a London-wide Car Crunch London promotion, which aims to take over 100,000 cars off the capital's roads by 2012. The scheme encouraging Londoners to give up a car in return for two year's free membership of Streetcar's pay-as-you-go car hire service, worth £119, and up to £250 worth of driving time over that period.

Double fine for dodgers

FARE dodgers now face a hefty fine on the capital's transport network – more than double the old £20 penalty.

Anyone caught on bus, Tube, DLR and London Overground services without a valid ticket or Oyster will pay £50 – although Transport for London (TfL) has also introduced an 'early payment incentive', so if a penalty is paid within 21 days the fine will be halved to £25.

The increase aims to deter more evaders, who cost fare paying Londoners £70 million pounds each year. Steve Burton, TfL's Director of Community Safety, Enforcement and Policing, said: "Fare evasion is low on our network, but it still costs Londoners millions of pounds. "This is unfair on our honest passengers, so we are making the penalty fare more effective to reassure them that we are tackling this issue head on."

Mapping the route to fitness

WITH Christmas over and spring round the corner, what better way to get in shape than by dusting off your bike and making 2009 the year to start cycling?

Local Cycling Guides four and 14 cover Hackney and much of north, east and central London, from Stoke Newington in the east to Marylebone in central London.

The free maps aim to help people explore London by bike, include routes on quieter roads that are recommended by cyclists, as well as off-road scenic routes through parks and along canals.

Residents who want to brush up on their cycling skills can take advantage of training for adults and children is available through the Council, with each session individually tailored to their needs. The lessons cover skills such as dealing with busy traffic, as well as a bike check, and an introduction to local cycle routes on quieter roads.

Team Leader for road safety talks to Hackney Today about the role of Principal Road Safety Officer.

What are the main responsibilities of the role?

You will help meet our casualty reduction targets by managing a team of up to six Road Safety Officers, providing road safety education and training to schools and other groups. Engaging audiences at all levels and being able to communicate the importance of road safety is a key part of the job.

You will also manage the School Crossing Patrol Service – approximately 40 part-time staff who help our children cross the road safely all year round in all weathers. You will have good project management, report writing and IT skills. Experience in performance management of a team, developing, prioritising and reviewing road safety activities are also part of the role.

What are the ideal qualities you are looking for?

As well as having all the skills to carry out the role, the ideal candidate will have a real enthusiasm for road safety. We are looking for someone who can work with people at all levels, and who knows how to communicate to Hackney's diverse audiences.

Why is it good to work in Hackney?

Hackney is a three-star borough, improving strongly and one of the host boroughs for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. The role is a fantastic chance to be part of team dedicated to improving road safety in the borough.

Try this delicious new recipe from our friends at Water House restaurant

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Chef Ben Spice was born in London, but his family moved to Cornwall when he was nine to run a smallholding.

Ben said: "I have great memories of pork and beans. I would help my dad with the pigs – then when I got in the door that evening I would probably be eating a relative of the pig I had been mucking out! "Pork and beans is a very versatile dish that can be easily adapted. I don't think I have ever had it the same way twice. Try adding butternut squash, spinach or something of your own choice. I love the combination of the rich, slightly sweet sauce with some jalapenos, smoked paprika or Tabasco."

Pork and Beans, Spice Style

Serves 6-8

Preparation time
45 mins

Cooking time
2-2½ hrs

Ingredients

- 2lb/1Kg belly pork (chopped into approx 1 inch/25mm pieces)
- 4 tablespoons wholemeal/white flour
- 2 teaspoons crushed pepper or to taste
- 2 teaspoons sea salt or to taste
- 3 tablespoons approx olive oil or butter
- 4 large onions chopped
- 6/8 cloves garlic
- 3 tablespoons black strap molasses (I buy mine from a local health food shop)
- ½ pint/300mls boiling water
- 2 x 400g tins tomatoes
- 6 tablespoons tomato puree
- 2 tablespoons sugar/honey
- 6oz/150g dried haricot beans (or 2 tins ready cooked)
- Splash soy sauce

Method

- If using dried beans soak overnight. Boil for 10 mins and cook for a further 45 mins until soft but not mushy
- Place flour in bowl or plastic bag with pepper and salt, add pork and coat thoroughly
- Heat oil or butter in pan and fry pork in batches until golden. Place in casserole dish
- Fry onions in same pan as pork until translucent. Add tomatoes and stir. Add everything in pan to the pork
- Dissolve molasses in the boiling water, pour over pork, add the rest of the ingredients. Stir thoroughly
- Cover and place in pre-heated oven to 180degrees/350 Fahrenheit/gas mark 4. Cook for 2-2½ hours. Add beans about 15-20mins before serving. Add more salt/pepper or soy sauce to taste

Top tip: Do you know what to do with the head, hock, chaps, or trotters of a pig? A good butcher will be only too happy to give you some suggestions as to how you might cook them. If you purchase meat from a butcher you could save money by buying less popular cuts and you'll learn how to recognise great meat

Talk about 2012

RESIDENTS are being asked to take part in a project which aims to record the changes in Hackney between now and 2012.

Hackney Museum's Mapping the Change project aims to document the changes to local people's lives brought about by the Olympic and Paralympic Games. These records will become an educational resource and a special exhibition in 2012, as well as being a permanent record for generations to come. It will give a unique picture of a crucial period in Hackney's history, as seen through the eyes of local people. Tell us what you think and how you'd like to take part in this project by taking our short survey. Visit: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney priorities are as part of an annual survey to shape the next year's scrutiny agenda. Scrutiny Commissions are made up of councillors who work across party political lines to investigate issues of local concern, and they need to know what Hackney residents want to see reviewed from June this year. Good Scrutiny plays an important role in the development of better policies and improving performance, and can hold the Council and outside agencies to account, including police and the health service. The Mayor & Councillors Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. Call the number below to check.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Hackney Council is committed to improving services and increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

REACHING OUT

Olca Aniker has been Homelessness Assessment Manager for six years

Due to the sheer diversity of Hackney's communities, the service carries out regular consultations and outreach events to better understand service users' needs. Olca said: "We aim to provide friendly, responsive services, delivered by well-trained and customer-focused staff."

"We want to ensure that everyone can access a service which is sensitive to their specific needs. We also work with the Government and the voluntary sector to combat the causes of homelessness and tackle unemployment among homeless people." The Service also works closely with the Council's Housing Advice and Options Team to prevent people from being made homeless. Olca added: "The Charter Mark is confirmation of our team and the Council's dedication to service delivery. "At the end of the day it is residents who are the real beneficiaries."

A dedication to good service

By
James Willsher

THE award-winning Homelessness Assessment Service works to help those with nowhere to live, and also to help those people at risk of becoming homeless.

Being made homeless is immensely stressful, and the service aims to be as sensitive, swift, and clear as possible when handling enquiries and assessments.

There are a number of reasons why someone may face homelessness, including redundancy; unlawful eviction or harassment; domestic violence; and mortgage or rent arrears.

The unit can offer advice on tenants' rights, and also works closely with the police, the Probation Service, and women's refuge projects.

Last year, after an extensive review, it became one of a growing number of Council teams to receive Charter Mark, a government standard for excellence in customer service.

The accompanying report added that the team "recognises its position in the front line within the borough and discharges its responsibilities with integrity, professionalism and sensitivity."

consult

In 2012 the eyes of the world will be on London. The 20,000 members of the media covering the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games will need cutting-edge facilities to show all the action from the Games.

In May 2008 the Olympic Delivery Authority held consultation events to discuss the plans for the International Broadcast Centre/Main Press Centre (IBC/MPC). Due to changes in the proposed buildings we will be consulting on the new plans at three drop-in sessions.

The planning submissions for the IBC/MPC will be submitted in three stages: one for the foundations of the buildings, a second for the design of the buildings, and a third for temporary buildings.

You are invited to attend a drop-in session to find out more about the new plans.
